PREFACE.

IN editing the recently discovered Hebrew fragments of the book of Ben Sira, we have limited our aim to presenting the original text with as little delay as possible, and at the same time giving in a convenient form the materials for further study. A full commentary, as well as a detailed comparison of the versions, must be left for the future. We shall therefore not discuss the author's full name, or the date of his composition or of the Greek and Syriac translations¹. For the literature on these points the reader is referred to Schürer's admirable work on 'The History of the Jewish People in the time of Jesus Christ².' In what follows we shall confine ourselves to some remarks on what is known, from Jewish sources, of Ben Sira and his writings.

It is now generally admitted that Jesus, son of Sirach (Σειράχ, סִירָא³), of Jerusalem, wrote his ethical work (usually quoted as 'the book of Ben Sira⁴'), in Hebrew, between 200 and 170 B.C. in Jerusalem. It was translated into Greek by his grandson, as stated in the prologue, from which we also gather that the version was made from the Hebrew, in the year 132 B.C.⁵ The Hebrew of the present fragment is (with the exceptions referred to below, p. xiii) classical, not Rabbinical: still less is it an Aramaic dialect, such as that of several of the passages quoted in both Talmuds (the Palestinian⁶ as well as the Babylonian), in the Midrashim, and in later Hebrew writings.

² English translation, 2nd division, vol. iii. p. 23 seqq. (Clark, Edinburgh, 1886); and later, his article on 'Apocryphen des Alten Testaments' in the Realencyclopädie für protestantische Theologie und Kirche, vol. i. p. 650 seqq. (3rd ed., Leipzig, 1896).

³ Schürer, op. cit., p. 25, explains the name to mean 'coat of mail.' In the Hebrew Josippon (Pseudo-Josephus) the form שִׁירָךְ is a transliteration from the Latin; v. Zunz, Die gottesdienstlichen Vorträge der Juden, 2nd ed., 1892, p. 107, note h. He was not, as sometimes stated, a priest; Zunz, ibid., p. 106.

⁶ It is remarkable that only five quotations are found in the Palestinian Talmud; see below, p. xix seqq. (Nos. I. 5, XVII, XXVI, XXXII, LIV).

In early times the book seems to have hovered on the verge of the canon, or to have been included among the כתובים (Hagiographa, see p. xxii below), since quotations from it are introduced by שנאמר (as it is said), a phrase applied only to the sacred writings. Although afterwards excluded from the canon by the Rabbis, it continued to live and to be appreciated both in the Palestinian and the Babylonian schools, as is proved by the fact that the text was constantly quoted either in the original or in a Rabbinical or Aramaic form. The Rabbis who lived before the destruction of the Temple used it without acknowledgement in the 'Sentences of the Fathers' (פרקי אבות), the earliest production of Rabbinical literature), while others quote from it either expressly under the name of Ben Sira, or anonymously, or else base their maxims upon it¹. Rabbi Akiba and Ben Azai borrowed from it *verbatim*², and there is reason to believe that some apocryphal books were influenced by it³. Thus the official exclusion from the canon did not involve destruction, as in the case of some Christian uncanonical Gospels and Acts: the book of Sirach was allowed to be freely read, but it was regarded merely as literature and not as sacred⁴. Passing on to the later history of the book, we find that S. Jerome⁵ (fourth century A.D.) possessed a Hebrew copy, although he did not translate it. That the book continued to be known, to individuals at least if not generally, is proved by the passages quoted from it (in a language already debased), by the Rabbis of the fifth and sixth centuries, in the later Midrashim of the seventh and eighth centuries (as the Tanḥuma), and in the sayings collected by R. Nathan in the ninth century⁶. Zunz (op. cit., p. 108, end of note e) believes that the early liturgist, R. Eleazar haq-Qalir, borrowed from Sirach (l. 5-8) in his liturgy for the day of Atonement, in praise of the High Priest. Simultaneously some of the sayings of Sirach are quoted by the Babylonian doctors in an Aramaic form⁷.

For the tenth century we are on even firmer ground as to the existence of the book in its original language. R. S'adyah (סעדיה) Gaon, of Bagdad (920 A.D.), and of the Fayyum in Egypt, was blamed by the Qaraites⁸ for sending out missives written in Hebrew provided with vowel-points and accents. They reproached him with endeavouring to give to his correspondence an appearance of holiness equal to that of the Biblical text, since the vowel-points and accents were supposed, according to tradition, to have been given with the Law on Mount Sinai. In answer to this accusation S^adyah¹ states that these additions to the text are found also in copies of Ben Sira, in the book of the Wisdom of Eleazar ben Irai (Iri²), and in the scroll of the Hasmoneans³. In the course of his defence he quotes seven (or rather eight, see note 2 below) genuine sayings of Sirach⁴ in classical Hebrew, so that it may be concluded that the book was at his disposal in the tenth century. The mentions of Ben Sira after this date are scanty and uncertain. R. Nissim ben Jacob (eleventh century) of Kairowân, in Tunisia, makes a quotation, which however he may have derived from S^adyah. In the eleventh century, according to Reifmann⁵, signs of Sirach's influence appear in the collection of sayings entitled מבחר הפנינים (Choice of Pearls), attributed to the famous poet and philosopher Solomon ben Gabirol⁶ (Avicbron). The same scholar⁷ also finds traces of the influence of Sirach (ii. 18) in the Jewish daily prayer⁸, and (xlix. 10 and 11) in the hymn⁹ for the outgoing of the Sabbath. He contends further that Sirach has an allusion (i. 2) to Aristotle and the doctrine of the eternity of matter, and that even Spinoza was perhaps influenced by Sirach (xliv. 34). These suggestions, as well as the inference (from the Aramaic form of the proverb, No. LIV below), that he was an Essene, are, to say the least, not convincing. There is no direct trace of the existence of the Hebrew Sirach in Spain, Provence, or among the Rabbis of France, the Rhine-land, and Germany. Rashi¹⁰, the authors of the glosses on the Talmud (תוספות), and even Maimonides¹¹, did not possess the book; and later Rabbis, who mention sentences from it, most probably quoted second-hand from older authorities¹. No doubt it might be said, though the supposition is not very probable, that all the quotations from Sirach were made from memory, and that they were derived from oral tradition. Recent discoveries however have removed all uncertainty on this point.

⁴ הקורא בהן כקורא באיגרת, J. T. Synhedrin x. 5.

² עירי or עיראי. It is curious to note that the saying . . . במופלא ממך (p. xix), ascribed in the Talmud to Ben Sira and found in the Greek version, is quoted by S^adyah (op. cit., p. 178, l. 18) as belonging to the Wisdom of Ben Irai. Of this Eleazar b. Irai, S^adyah also quotes two other sentences in classical Hebrew, but not in so easy a style as most of Sirach. He says Ben Irai's book of Wisdom is analogous to Ecclesiastes, while Ben Sira resembles the book of Proverbs. Of this enigmatical Eleazar ben Irai nothing further is known. Perhaps he is identical with the R. Eleazar who often reports sayings בשם בן סירא (see p. xix). Bacher (Die Agada d. Palästinschen Amoräer, ii. 1896, p. 11, note 5) identifies him, not very plausibly, with Eleazar ben Pedath.

Mrs. Lewis, who brought to light the now famous codex of the Syriac Gospels in the convent on Mount Sinai, some time ago acquired some manuscript fragments in the East², among which Mr. S. Schechter, Reader in Talmudic in the University of Cambridge, recognized one leaf as containing a fragment of Sirach (xxxix. 15 to xl. 7) in Hebrew, which he published with English translation, introduction, and notes in the Expositor for July 1896, (p. 1 seqq.). Through the kindness of the owner we have since been allowed to make a fresh examination of the leaf, and have found reason to alter some of the readings accepted by Mr. Schechter (see the Hebrew text, pp. 2 and 4). Although the leaf is mutilated in places, the parts which are still intact are abundantly sufficient to show the character and style of the composition, and to convince critics that the text is original and not a translation. After pointing this out, Mr. Schechter rightly adds: 'Its correspondence with the versions changes almost in every line, agreeing in some places with the Greek, in others with the Syriac. In other places, again, it agrees with neither of these versions, omitting whole clauses which are to be found both in the Greek and in the Syriac, or offering new readings which have been either misunderstood or misread by the translators. Certain clauses, again, are to be found in our MS. which are wanting in both versions, or are only reproduced by a very short paraphrase. There cannot, therefore, be even the shadow of a doubt that our text represents nothing else but the original. Even the marginal glosses testify to this fact. Such differences of plena and defectiva as צורך and צורך, or such fine variants as פיו and פיהו, cannot possibly have been suggested by any translation, and could only have been made from some other copy of the original.'

Almost simultaneously the Bodleian Library acquired, through Professor Sayce, a box of Hebrew and Arabic fragments, among which we recognized another portion of the same text of Sirach, consisting of nine leaves, and forming the continuation of Mrs. Lewis' leaf, from chapter xl. 9 to xlix. 11. These fragments cannot be part of the copy mentioned by S^aadyah, since they are not provided with vowel-points or accents, and also because the writing is not of the tenth century, but of the end of the eleventh³ at the earliest, as may be seen from the facsimiles. The MS. does not seem to us to have been written by a Qaraite. There are in both fragments marginal notes⁴ giving the variants of another copy of Sirach, or more probably of two other copies. These copies were however

² See Jewish Quarterly Review, ix. p. 115 seqq.

³ Mr. Schechter (ibid., p. 4) considers it 'certainly not later than the beginning of the twelfth century.'

⁴ These are indicated in the MS. by a small circle ° over the word in the text, which we reproduce.

incomplete, the marginal notes giving their variants only as far as chapter xlv. 8 (see note in loco), and on xlvii. 8 and 9. In the Bodleian fragment there are also at least two Persian glosses (ff. 1 and 5^b), which point to its having been written in Bagdad or Persia, possibly transcribed from S^cadyah's copy. The MS. is written on oriental paper, and is arranged in lines, eighteen to the page (in Mrs. Lewis' leaf one line is cut off), and the lines are divided into hemistichs. There is no indication of chapters, but a line is left blank occasionally, as shown in our printed text. The MS. is unfortunately damaged in many places, which we have marked by dots, showing approximately the number of letters missing, and by [] when letters are supplied. Our object being however to give the text of Sirach as we found it, we have carefully restricted conjecture to its narrowest limits. In some cases we have preferred to leave a lacuna, where either the space in the MS. did not allow of what seemed the obvious word, or some letter such as l, j, or p was excluded; see e.g. xlv. 13^b. In every case a letter about which we felt there could be any reasonable doubt, has been marked with a horizontal stroke, thus ñ. On some orthographical peculiarities of the MS. see the note appended to the glossary, p. xxxvi. As regards the translation again, we have deemed it our duty as editors of a unique manuscript, to express the text faithfully, and not to adopt conjectural readings, except where the text yielded absolutely no sense. Usually, indeed, the meaning is clear; but passages occur which, from whatever cause, are obscure, and we cannot feel confident that we have seized the sense of all of them. A (?) in the translation indicates doubt either as to the reading or the rendering. There are sufficient indications that the text is not everywhere in its original purity, and we do not doubt that (as in many parts of the O. T.) cases will be found in which a purer reading has been preserved by one or other of the early versions; but a detailed comparison of the Hebrew text and the versions, and a discussion of their comparative merits, must, we think, be left to a commentary, as well as to a time when, we may hope, more of the original shall have been recovered. We have noted, lastly, the more important places in which the language is coloured by reminiscences of the Old Testament.

The language, as already observed, is classical Hebrew, the syntax displaying no traces of the peculiar New-Hebrew constructions, such as occur, for instance, so frequently in Ecclesiastes¹, though the vocabulary has an admixture of late or Aramaic words or expressions, such as might be expected from the date at which the author wrote. The latter, together with other words not occurring in Biblical Hebrew, will be found collected in the glossary (p. xxxi). The style is occasionally a little heavy, but this may sometimes be due to corruption of the text. Otherwise (especially chap. xlv. ff.) it is remarkably easy and flowing. It stands throughout on an altogether higher level than that, for instance, of Chronicles, Ecclesiastes, or the Hebrew parts of Daniel. We know from Ecclesiastes that the New-Hebrew idiom was in process of formation at this time, and it is evident that both New-Hebrew and Aramaic¹ words were current in the Hebrew with which the author was familiar; but the predominant character of his style is nevertheless pure and classical. The marginal readings are often interesting: the variations which they indicate are frequently considerably greater than those noted by the Massorites in the O. T., and resemble rather the various readings often presupposed by the LXX, while at other times they are noticeable as giving an Aramaic equivalent for a Hebrew word in the text. Sirach's position with regard to the New-Hebrew would no doubt be made clearer by the discovery of the originals of other apocryphal books, such as Judith, Maccabees i, Enoch, and the Psalms of Solomon. Finally the theory that he wrote his proverbs in metre is not supported by the newly-recovered text: the lines are very variable in length, and there is no indication that the author sought to adapt them to a uniform metrical scheme.

In the present edition we give:—(a) The Hebrew text, with the marginal notes and glosses arranged as in the MS. (b) The English translation of the Hebrew, adopting as far as possible the diction of the revised version of the O. T. (c) The Syriac version (which was made from the Hebrew), according to Lagarde's edition, a blank space indicating that the translator, or copyist, omitted a passage. (d) The Greek translation, according to Dr. Swete's edition, the blanks again indicating such omissions. The uncertain condition of the Greek text is well illustrated by Hatch², and will strike the reader on even a slight examination. Its value for comparative purposes is further lessened by the translator's tendency to paraphrase, as is the case also with the Syriac. (e) At the end, the Old Latin, according to Lagarde's edition of the Codex Amiatinus. For more convenient reference we have in all five texts numbered the chapters and verses as in Dr. Swete's edition, and indicated the hemistichs by letters of the alphabet in order. The Syriac, Greek, and Latin texts are reproduced exactly as in the editions followed. It did not fall within our plan to give the variants of these versions. (f) A glossary of noticeable words and expressions. (g) A list of proverbs attributed to Sirach in Talmudic and Rabbinical literature, with a translation, arranged in the order of the Greek version. Here again we resolved not to add the various readings, since the Talmudic dialect is not the original language of Sirach, and moreover, all the new Talmudic fragments found within the last two years have not yet been collated. For completeness sake we have added the so-called 'Alphabets' of Ben Sira, a late composition—probably of the eleventh century or perhaps even later, but containing some genuine proverbs of Sirach, both in the first and second parts³. The stories given after each proverb in part i. are mostly indecent, and written in mockery of Jewish literature. We reproduce the first ~~MS.~~ (MS. second), with a translation: for the second (MS. first), we only refer to the numbers in our list of proverbs with which it agrees, ignoring the rest as alien to Sirach. The Alphabets¹, though a late and unedifying compilation², survived, whilst Ecclesiasticus was completely neglected. A Persian text of them was lately acquired by the British Museum (MS. Or. 4731), and another copy has just been brought by Mr. E. N. Adler from Persia, probably translated from the Constantinople edition (see below, p. xxix). (h) Some specimens of attempted restorations of the original Hebrew by modern scholars confronted with our text. The comparison will, we think, justify the caution and reservation which must be observed in attempting to restore lost works on the basis of ancient translations³. In the present instance, for example, both versions prove to be much freer than was assumed to be the case by those who so used them.

¹ The strong Syriasms which sometimes occur, deserve notice, as תסחור (41, 5^e) and משרי (42, 12^b).

³ In the Bodleian MS. No. 1466 the order is reversed.

In conclusion, we have great pleasure in acknowledging the help of friends who have enabled us to carry through the work in a short time in spite of difficulties. Mr. J. F. Stenning, of Wadham College, rendered valuable aid in deciphering the difficult parts of the MS., including the Cambridge leaf, and in all doubtful places he concurs in the readings which we have adopted in our text. He also revised the Syriac. Mr. E. N. Bennett, of Hertford College, read the Greek: Rev. F. E. Brightman, Librarian of the Pusey House, read the Latin. Professor D. S. Margoliouth has also shown an interest in the work in various ways. We feel, however, specially grateful to the Regius Professor of Hebrew, Dr. Driver. He revised the translation throughout, besides being entirely responsible for the glossary, with the note appended, and almost every page of the book owes something to the judgement and accuracy which he has been always ready to expend upon it.

Seadyah in הלוי"ם (ed. Harkavy), p. 178, l. 18, quotes as an extract from the Wisdom of Eleazar ben Irai (see Preface, p. xi) the following:

במופלא ממך אל תדרש, במכוסה ממך אל תחקר.
באשר הרשית התבונן, לא יש לך עסק בנסתרות

This seems to be the original text of Ben Sira.

Inquire not into that which is too difficult for thee;
and that which is concealed from thee search not out.

Attend to that which is permitted to thee:
thou hast no business with hidden things.

* רבי לעזר (אלעזר) בשם בר סירה: פליאה ממך מה תדע, עמוקה משאול מה תחקר, במה שהורשית
התבונן, אין לך עסק בנסתרות
J. T. Ḥaghighah, ii. (fol. 77^e).

That which is too difficult for thee, why shouldst
thou know?

that which is deeper than Sheol, why shouldst
thou search out?

Attend to that which is permitted to thee;
thou hast no business with hidden things.

c.

* כתוב בספר בן סירא בגדול ממך אל תדרש, בחזק ממך אל תחקר, במופלא ממך אל תדע, במכוסה ממך אל תשאל, במה שהרשית התבונן ואין לך עסק בנסתרות

B. T. Ḥaghighah, fol. 13^a.

Inquire not into that which is too great for thee;
and that which is too hard for thee, search not out.

That which is too difficult for thee do not know;
and that which is concealed from thee do not ask.
Attend to that which is permitted to thee;
thou hast no business with hidden things.

d.

* ר' אליעזר אמ' בשם ב"ר (בן סירא) (i. e.) בגדול ממך אל תדרש בחזק ממך אל תחקר במופלא ממך אל

אין לך עסק בנסתרות

לעולם אל יטיל אדם אימה יתירה בתוך ביתו
B. T. Gittin, fol. 6^b.

Let a man never bring excessive terror into his house.

III.

- Sir. 5, 4.
Μὴ εἴπῃς ἡμάρτον, καὶ τί μοι ἐγένετο;
ὁ γὰρ κύριός ἐστιν μακρόθυμος.
אם יאמר לך יצר הרע חטוא והקב"ה מוחל אל תאמן
B. T. Ḥaghighah, fol. 16^a.

If the evil propensity say to thee, Sin, for the Holy One (blessed be he!) excuseth, do not believe.

IV.

- Sir. 5, 5.
περὶ ἐξίλασμού μὴ ἄφοβος γίνου,
προσθεῖναι ἁμαρτίαν ἐφ' ἁμαρτίας·
καὶ μὴ εἴπῃς Ὁ οἰκτειρὸς αὐτοῦ πολὺς, τὸ πλῆθος τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν μου ἐξιλιάσεται·
ἔλεος γὰρ καὶ ὀργὴ παρ' αὐτοῦ,
καὶ ἐπὶ ἁμαρτωλοὺς καταπαύσει ὁ θυμὸς αὐτοῦ.

ועל רשעים ינוח עון
S^adyah, p. 176, l. 19.

And be not confident of pardon,
to add iniquity to iniquity,
or say, His mercies are great,
he will pardon the multitude of my iniquities;
for mercy and wrath are with him,
and his might resteth upon the wicked.

V.

Sir. 5, 7. *μη ἀνάμενε ἐπιστρέψαι πρὸς κύριον,
καὶ μὴ ὑπερβάλλου ἡμέραν ἐξ ἡμέρας.*
שוב יום אחד לפני מיתתך

S^adyah, op. cit., p. 178, l. 1; also B. T. Yebamoth, fol. 63^b, and Synhedrin, fol. 100^b, where the words of Micha 7, 5, משיבתי חקך שמור פהדי כד, follow.
Let those that are at peace with thee be many,
but reveal thy secret to one of a thousand [keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth
in thy bosom].

VIII.

Sir. 6, 7. *εἰ κτᾶσαι φίλον, ἐν πειρασμῷ κτῆσαι αὐτόν,

יש אוהב כפי עת ולא יעמד ביום צרה

If thou gettest a friend, get him by proving,
and be not hasty to trust in him;
for there is a friend according to the occasion;
and he will not abide in the day of adversity.

* מפרש בספר בן סירא: לכך קורא מקום להקבה

It is explained in the book of Ben Sira, that the Holy One (blessed be he!) is called 'place', because he is the place of (i.e. contains) the world, and the world is not his place.

See Schechter (J. Q. R. iii. p. 697, No. 24, and p. 706, note 109), who points out that the passage is probably taken from Bereshith Rabba (ג'), not from Ben Sira (ס'). See No. I. d.

The rest of the passage is very corrupt, and cannot be translated without resorting to violent emendations. See Schechter, ibid., p. 696, and p. 705 for Reifmann's reconstruction.

The next two passages have been quoted as belonging to Ben Sira, but on insufficient grounds.

VERSIO VETUS LATINA.

[The verses are numbered to agree with the Greek text. Lagarde's numeration, where it differs, is added in parentheses.]

XXXIX. (20) 15^o in canticis labiorum et citharis, (21) 16 Opera domini universa bona valde.

et sic dicitis in confessione :

(22) 17^o in verbo eius stetit aqua sicut congeries,
(23) 18 quoniam in praecepto ipsius placor fit,
(24) 19 opera omnis carnis coram illo,
(25) 20 a saeculo usque in saeculum respicit,

et in sermone oris illius sicut exceptorium
aquarum.
et non est minoratio in salute illius.
et non est quicquam absconditum ab oculis
eius.

(26) 21 non est dicere Quid est hoc, aut quid est
illud ?

20^d et nihil est mirabile in conspectu eius.

omnia enim in tempore suo quaerentur.

(27) 22 benedictio illius quasi fluvius inundavit,
23 sic ira ipsius gentes quæ non exquisierunt
eum hereditavit.

(28) et quo modo diluvium aridam inebriavit,
(29) quo modo convertit aquas, et siccata est
terra,

24 et viae illius viis illorum directae sunt :
(30) 25 bona bonis creata sunt ab initio :
(31) 26 initium necessariae rei vitae hominum
26^o lac et panis similagineus et mel

sic peccatoribus offensiones in ira eius.
sic nequissimis bona et mala.
aqua, ignis et ferrum,
et botrus uvæ et oleum et vestimentum.
sic et impiis et peccatoribus in mala conversantur.

(32) 27 haec omnia sanctis in bonis,
(33) 28 sunt spiritus qui ad vindictam creati sunt,
(34) 28^o in tempore consummationis effundent
virtutem,

et in furore suo confirmaverunt tormenta sua.
et furorem eius qui fecit illos, placebunt.

(35) 29 ignis, grando, fames et mors,
(36) 30 bestiarum dentes et scorpia et serpentes

omnia haec ad vindictam creata sunt :
et romphea vindicans in exterminium impios.
30^d et super terram in necessitatem praepara-
buntur,

(37) 31 in mandatis eius aepulabuntur,
(38) 32 propterea ab initio confirmatus sum
(39) 33 omnia opera domini bona,
(40) 34 non est dicere Hoc illo nequius est :
(41) 35 et nunc in omni corde et ore conlaudate

et in temporibus suis non praeterient verbum.
et consiliatus sum, et cogitavi et scripta dimisi.
et omne opus ora sua subministravit.
omnia enim in tempore suo comprobabuntur.
et benedicite nomen domini.

XL. 1 occupatio magna creata est omnibus
hominibus,

et iugum gravem super filios Adam

1^o a die exitus de ventre matris eorum
2 cogitationes eorum et timorem cordis,
3 a sedentes super sedem gloriosam

usque in diem sepulturae in matrem omnium.
adinventio expectationis et dies finitionis,
usque ad humiliatum in terra et cinere,

- 4 ab eo qui utitur hyacinto et portat coronam
 5 furor, zelus, tumultus, fluctuatio
 (5) 5^o et in tempore refectionis in cubile
 6 modicum tamquam nihil in requie,
 (7) 6^o cor turbatus est in visu cordis sui
 7 in tempore salutis suae exsurrexit,
 8 cum omni carne, ab homine usque ad pecus, 9 ad haec mors, sanguinis, contentio et romphea,
 10 super iniquos creata sunt haec omnia,
 11 omnia quae de terra sunt, in terram
 convertentur,
 13 substantia iniustorum sicut fluvius sicca-
 buntur,
 14 in aperiendo manus suas laetabitur:
 15 nepotes impiorum non multiplicab ramos,
 16 super omnem aquam viriditas, et ad horam
 fluminis
 17 gratia sicut paradisus in benedictionibus, 18 fili, vita sibi sufficientis operarii condul-
 cabitur,
 19 aedificatio civitatis confirmavit nomen,
 20 vinum et musica laetificant cor,
 21 tibiae et psalterium suabem faciunt melo-
 diam,
 22 gratiam et speciem desideravit oculus,
 23 amicus et sodalis in tempore convenientes,
 24 fratres in adiutorium in tempore tribula-
 tionis,
 25 aurum et argentum et constitutio peduum,
 26 facultates et virtutes exaltant cor,
 (27) 26^o non est in timore domini minoratio,
 (28) 27 timor domini sicut paradisus benedictionis,
 de indigentia misera.
 (29) 28 fili, in tempore vitae tuae ne indiges:
 (30) 29 vir respiciens in mensam alienam,
 29^o alit enim animam suam cibis alienis.
 (32) 30 in ore imprudentis condulcabitur inopia,
 de memoria et iudicium mortis.
 XLI. 1 o mors, quam amara est memoria tua.
 (2) 1^o viro quieto et cuius viae directae sunt in omnibus,
 usque ad eum qui operitur ligno crudo:
 et timor mortis, iracundia perseverans et contentio,
 somnus noctis inmutat scientiam.
 et ab eo in somnis quasi in die respectus.
 tamquam qui evaserit in die belli.
 et admirans ad nullum timorem,
 et super peccatores septuplum.
 oppraessiones, famis et contritio et flagella.
 et propter illos factus est catachismis.
 et aquae omnes in mare convertentur.
 12 et fides in saeculum stabit.
 et sicut tonitruum magnum in pluvia personabunt.
 sic praevaricatores in consummatione tabes-
 cent.
 et radices immundae super cacumen petrae
 sonant.
 omne faenum evelletur.
 et misericordia in saeculo permanet.
 et in ea invenies thesaurum.
 19^d et super haec mulier immaculata computatur.
 et super utraque dilectio sapientiae.
 et super utraque lingua suavis.
 et super haec verides sationes.
 et super utrosque mulier cum viro.
 et super eos misericordia liberavit.
 et super utrumque consilium beneplacitum.
 et super haec timor domini.
 et non est in eo quaerere adiutorium.
 et super omnem gloriam operuerunt illum.
 melius est enim mori quam indigere.
 non est vita eius in cogitatione victus:
 (31) vir autem disciplinatus et eruditus custodiet se.
 et in ventre eius ignis ardebit.

- (3) 2 o mors, bonum est iudicium tuum
 (4) 2^e defecto aetate et cui de omnibus cura est
 (5) 3 noli metuere iudicium mortis.
 4 hoc iudicium a domino omni carni.
 4^c sive decem sive centum sive mille anni.
 (8) 5 filii abominationum. fiunt filii peccatorum,
 (9) 6 filiorum peccatorum periet hereditas,
 (10) 7 de patre impio quaeruntur filii,
 (11) 8 vae vobis, viri impii,
 (12) 9 etsi nati fueritis, in maledictione nasceremini,

- (13) 10 omnia quae de terra sunt, in terram
 convertentur:
 (14) 11 luctus hominum in corpore ipsorum:
 (15) 12 curam habe de bono nomine: hoc enim
 magis permanebit tibi
 (16) 13 bonae vitae numerus dierum.
 (17) 14 disciplinam in pace conservate, filii:
 14^b sapientia enim abscondita et thesaurus
 invisus,
 (18) 15 melior est homo qui abscondit stultitiam
 suam,

- (20) 16^b non est enim bonum omnem in reveren-
 tiam observare,

ab omnibus vitiis declinandum.

- (21) 17 erubescite patrem et matrem de fornica-
 tione,
 (22) 18 a principe et iudice de delicto,
 (23) 18^c a socio et amico de iniustitia
 19^b de veritate dei et testamento,
 19^d et ab obfuscatione dati et accepti,
 20^b a respectu mulieris fornicariae,
 21^b et ab auferendo partem et non restituendo.
 22 et ne scruteris ancillam eius,
 (28) 22^c a . b amicis de sermonibus improprietatis,

XLII.

- 1 non duplices sermonem auditus
 1^e et eris vere sine confusione,
 1^e ne pro his omnibus confundaris,
 2 de lege altissimi et testamento,
 3 de verbo sociorum et viatorum
 4 de aequalitate staterae et ponderum,
 5 de corruptione emtionis et negotiatorum

homini indigenti et qui minoratur viribus,
 et incredibili qui perdit sapientiam.
 memento e te fuerunt et quae
 superventura sunt tibi:

- (6) et quid superveniet in beneplacito altissimi?
 (7) non est enim in inferno accusatio vitae.
 et qui conversantur secus domos impiorum.
 et cum semine illorum assiduitas obprobrii.
 quoniam propter illum sunt in opprobrio.
 qui dereliquistis legem domini altissimi.

- 9^b et si mortui fueritis, in maledictione erit
 mors vestra.

sic impii a maledicto in perditionem,

nomen autem impiorum delebitur.

quam mille thesauri magni pretiosi.

bonum autem nomen permanebit in aevo.

quae utilitas in utrisque?

quam homo qui abscondit sapientiam
 suam.

- (19) 16 verum tamen reveremini in his quae pro-
 cedunt de ore meo.

et non omnia omnibus bene placent in fide.

et a praesidente et a potente de mendacio,

a synagoga et plebe de iniquitate,

- 19 et de loco in quo habitas, (24) de furto,
 de discubitu in panibus

- (25) 20 a salutantibus de silentio,

- 21 ab aversione vultus cognati.

- (26) ne avertas faciem a proximo tuo,

- (27) 21^c ne respicias mulierem alieni viri,

neque steteris ad lectum eius.

et cum dederis, ne improprietatis.

de revelatione sermonis absconditi,
 et invenies gratiam in conspectu omnium
 hominum:

ne accipias personam ut delinquas.

de iudicio iustificare impium,

et de datione hereditatis amicorum,

et de acquisitione multorum et paucorum,

et de multa disciplina filiorum

- 6 super mulierem nequam bonum est signum.
 7 et quodcumque trades, numera et appende,
 8 de disciplina insensati et fatui
 8^o et eris eruditus in omnibus,
 9 filia patris abscondita est vigilia,
 9^o ne forte in adulescentia sua adultera
 efficiatur,
 10 ne quando polluat in virginitate sua,
 10^o ne forte cum viro commorata transgre-diatur,
 11 super filiam luxuriosam confirma custo-
 diam,
 11^o a detractone in civitate et abiectioe plebis,
 12 omni homini noli intendere in specie,
 13 de vestimentis enim procedit tinea,
 14 melior iniquitas viri quam benefaciens
 mulier,
 15 memor ero igitur operum domini,
 15^o in osermonibus domini opera eius.
 16 sol inluminans per omnia respexit,
 17 nonne dominus fecit sanctos
 17^o quae confirmavit dominus omnipotens
 18 abyssum et cor hominum investigavit,
 (19) 18^o cognovit enim dominus omnem scientiam,
 19 annuntians quae prae . terierunt et quae
 superventura sunt,
 20 et non praeterit illum omnis cogitatus,
 21 magnalia sapientiae suae decoravit
 21^o neque adiectum est (22) neque minuetur,
 (23) 22 quam desiderabilia omnia opera eius,
 (24) 23 omnia haec . . . ent et manent in saeculum,
 (25) 24 omnia duplicia, unum contra unum,
 (26) 25 uniuscuiusque confirmavit bona,
 XLIII. 1 altitudinis firmamentum pulchritudo est,
 2 sol in aspectu annuntians in exitu,
 3 in meridiano exurit terram,
 4 fornacem custodiens in operibus . rdoris.
 4^o radios igneos exuflans
 5 magnus dominus qui fecit illum,
 6 iter (6) luna in omnibus in tempore suo,
 7 a luna signum diei festi,
 8 mensis secundum nomen eius est,
 (9) 8^o vas castrorum in excelsis,
 (10) 9 species caeli gloria stellarum
 et servo pessimo latus sanguinare.
 (7) ubi manus multae sunt, clude,
 datum vero et acceptum omne describe.
 et de senioribus qui iudicantur ab adulescen-
 tibus,
 et probabilis in conspectu omnium virorum.
 et sollicitudo eius auferet somnium,
 et commorata cum viro odibilis fiat.
 et in paternis suis gravida inveniat :
 aut certe sterelis efficiatur.
 ne quando faciat te in opprobrium venire
 inimicis
 et confundat te in multitudinem populi.
 et in medio mulierum noli commorari.
 et a muliere iniquitas viro.
 et mulier confundens in opprobrium,
 et quae vidi, adnuntiabo.
 et gloria domini plenum est opus eius.
 enarrare omnia mirabilia sua
 stabilis in gloria sua ?
 et in astutia illorum excogitavit.
 et inspexit in signum aevi,
 revelans vestigia occultorum.
 et non abscondit se ab eo ullus sermo.
 qui est ante saeculum et usque in saeculum,
 et non eget alicuius consilio.
 et tamquam scintillam quam est considerare.
 et in omni necessitate omnia obaudiunt ei.
 et non fecit quicquam deesse.
 et quis satiabitur videns gloriam eius ?
 species caeli in visione gloriae.
 vas ammirabile, opus excelsi.
 et in conspectu ardoris eius quis poterit
 sustinere ?
 (4) tripliciter sol exurens montes.
 et refulgens radiis suis obcaecat oculos.
 et in sermonibus eius festinavit.
 ostensio temporis et signum aevi.
 luminare quod minuitur in consummatione.
 crescens ammirabiliter in consummationem.
 in firmamento caeli resplendens gloriosum.
 mundum inluminans in excelsis dominus.

- (11) 10 in verbis sancti stabunt ad iudicium,
 (12) 11 vide arcum, et benedic qui fecit illum :
 (13) 12 giravit caelum in circuitu gloriae suae :
 (14) 13 imperio suo adcelebravit nivem,
 (15) 14 propterea aperti sunt thesauri,
 (16) 15 in magnitudine sua posuit nubes,
 (17) 16 in conspectu eius commovebuntur montes,
 (18) 17 vox tonitruī eius verberavit terram,
 (19) 17^c sicut avis deponens ad sedendum adspargit
 nivem,
 (20) 18 pulchritudinem candoris eius ammirabitur
 oculus,
 (21) 19 gelum sicut salem effundet super terram,
 (22) 20 frigidus ventus aquilo flavit,
 20^c super omnem congregationem aquarum
 requiescit,
 (23) 21 devoravit montes et exuret desertum,
 (24) 22 medicina omnium in festinationem nebulae,
 (25) 23 in sermone eius siluit ventus,
 cogitatione sua placabit abyssum
 (26) 24 qui navigat mare, enarrat pericula eius,
 (27) 25 illic praeclara et mira et mirabilia opera,
 (28) 26 propter ipsum consummatus est itineris
 finis,
 (29) 27 multa dicimus et deficiemus verbis,
 (30) 28 gloriantes ad quid valebimus ?
 (31) 29 terribilis dominus et magnus vehementer,
 (32) 30 glorificantes dominum,
 (33) be . edicentes dominum, exaltate illum
 quantum potestis :
 (34) 30^c exaltantes eum replebimini virtute :
 (35) 31 quis vidit eum, et enarrabit ?
 (36) 32 multa abscondita sunt maiora his :
 (37) 33 omnia autem dominus fecit,
 XLIV. 1 laudemus viros gloriosos,
 2 multam gloriam fecit dominus
 3 dominantes in potestatibus suis,
 3^c et prudentia sua praediti,
 4 et inperantes in praesentis populorum
 (5) 4^c sanctissima verba, et in pueritia sua
 5 requirentes modos musicos
 6 homines divites in virtute, pulchritudinis
 studium habentis,
 et non deficient in vigiliis suis.
 valde speciosus est in splendore suo.
 manus excelsi aperuerunt illum.
 et adcelerat coruscationes emittere iudicii sui.
 et evolaverunt nebulae sicut aves.
 et confracti sunt lapides grandinis.
 et in voluntate eius aspiravit notus.
 tempestas aquilonis et congregatio spiritus.
 et sicut lucusta demergens descensus eius.
 et super imbrem eius expavescit cor.
 et dum zelaverit, fiet tamquam cacumina tribuli.
 et gelavit cristallus ab aqua :
 et sicut lorica induit se aquis.
 et extinguet viridem sicut ignem.
 et ros obvians ab ardore venienti humilem
 efficiet eum.
 et plantavit illum dominus ihs.
 et audiente . . . ribus non ammirabimur.
 varia genera bestiarum et omnium peccorum et creatura beluarum.
 et in sermone eius composita sunt omnia.
 consummatio autem sermonum ipse est in omnibus.
 ipse enim omnipotens super omnia opera sua.
 et mirabilis potentia ipsius.
 quantumcumque potueritis, supervalebit adhuc,
 et ammirabilis magnificentia eius.
 maior est enim omni laude.
 ne laboretis, non enim pervenietis.
 et quis magnificavit eum sicut est ab initio ?
 pauca enim vidimus operum eius.
 et pie agentibus dedit sapientiam.
 et parentes nostros in generatione sua.
 magnificentia sua a saeculo.
 homines magni virtute
 nuntiantes dignitatem prophetarum.
 et virtute prudentiae populi
 et narrantes carmina scribaturarum.
 pacificantes in domibus suis.

- 7 omnes isti in generationibus gentis suae
gloriam adepti sunt,
8 qui de illis nati sunt, relinquerunt nomen
9 et sunt quorum non est . . memoria :
9^c et nati sunt quasi non nati,
10 sed illi viri misericordiae sunt
11 et cum semine ipsorum perseverat
11^c & 12 semen in testamento stetit,
13 usque in aeternum manet semen eorum,
14 corpora ipsorum in pace sepulta sunt,
15 sapientiam ipsorum narrent populi, 16 Enoch placuit deo, et translatus est in paradiso,
17 Noe inventus est perfectus iustus,
(18) 17^c ideo redimissum est reliquum terrae,
(19) 18 testamenta saeculi posita sunt apud illum,
(20) 19 Abraham magnus pater multitudinis
gentium, 20 qui conservavit legem excelsi,

 et in morte mirabilia opera eius.
 et non recesserunt a peccatis suis,
 et dispersi sunt in omnem terram.
 et princeps in domo David.

alii autem multa commiserunt peccata.

et induxit in medium ipsius aquam,
 et aedificavit ad aquam puteum.
 et misit Rapsacen, et sustulit manum suam
 contra illos,
 et superbus factus est potentia sua.
 et doluerunt quasi parturientes mulieres.
 expandentes manus, extulerunt ad caelum,

(23) non est commemoratus peccatorum illorum,

20^d sed purgabit illos in manu Esaię sancti
 prophetae.

et contrivit illos angelus dei.
 et fortiter ibit in via David patris sui,

(fol. 9 recto.)

12^o All his life long he quaked before none,
 13 No matter was too hard for him,
 14 In his life he did wonders,
 15 For all this the people turned not,
 15^o Till they were rooted up from their land,
 15^o But there were left to Judah a few,
 16 There were of them that dealt uprightly,
 17 Hezekiah strengthened² his city,
 17^o And hewed the rocks with³ brass,
 18 In his days came up Sennacherib,
 18^o And he stretched out his hand against Sion,
 19 [Then were] they melted in the pride of their heart,
 20 So they ca[lled] unto God Most High,
 20^o And he [heard] the voice of their prayer,
 21 And [he smote the c]amp of the Assyrian,
 22 [For Heze]kiah [did] that which was go[od],

PRAISE OF THE PATRIARCHS.

- XLIV. 1 Let me now praise godly men,
 2 Great glory the Most High allotted (to them¹),
 3 Rulers² of the earth in their royalty,
 3^o Who gave counsel³ by their understanding,
 4 Princes of nations in their prudence,
 4^o Wise of meditation in their writing,
 5 Who sought out music according to rule⁵,
 6 Men of worth, and supported⁶ with strength,
 7 All these in their generation (were honoured¹),
 8 There be of them that have left a name,
 9 And there be of them which have no memorial, 9^o They were as though they had not been,
 10 Nevertheless these were godly men,
 11 With their seed their goodness remaineth sure,
 13 Their memory standeth fast for ever,
 14 [Their bodies were buried in p]eac[e, 16 Enoch [was f]ound perfect, and walked with the Lord, and was taken,
- our fathers in their generations,
 and they were great from days of old:
 and men of renown in their might;
 and saw all things in their prophecy;
 and potentates in their care⁴;
 and governing in their watchfulness;
 and took up the proverb in writing;
 and that lived quietly upon their places.
 and from their birth⁷ was their glory.
 that men might tell of it in their inheritance:
 and have ceased as they have ceased;
 and their children after them.
 and their hope [shall not peri]sh;
 and their inheritance unto chil[dren's children];
 and their righteousness [shall not be forgotten];
 but their name liveth] unto all generations⁸.
 being an example (lit. sign) of knowledge to all generations.

XLII. 1 Of repeating a word that thou hearest,

1^c So shalt thou be truly shamefast,1^e But of these things be not ashamed,

2 Of the law of the Most High and the statute,

3 Of reckoning with a partner and a master⁴,4^a Of the small dust of the scales⁵ and balance, 5^a and of exchange by ephah and stone (weight),4^b Of buying⁶ between much and little,5^c and of smiting⁷ a deceitful [servant].6 Upon an evil⁸ woman set⁹ a seal, [count¹¹,but a place of weak hands thou mayest open¹⁰.7 In the place where thou committest³ a deposit, and let giving and receiving all be in writing.

8 (Be not ashamed) of the correction of the simple and the fool, or of him that is grey-headed and very aged, and that

(yet) taketh counsel for¹² whoredom.8^c So shalt thou be well-advised in truth, and lowly before all living.

9 A daughter is to a father a deceptive treasure, and the care of her³ [putteth away his sleep]:9^c In her youth lest she commit adultery,

and in her virginity lest [she be defiled],

10 In her virginity lest she be seduced,

and in the house of [her lord lest she bear not?],

10^c In the house of her father lest [she play the harlot?],

and in the house of her hu[sband lest]

11 [My son, keep a strict watch over thy daughter, lest she make thee³] a name of evil odour³,11^c A byword in the city and a cursing of the people,and shame³ thee [in the con]gregation of the gate.

On vers. 9^c-11^c, the marg. has: In the house of her father [lest she play the harlot, and] in the house of her lord lest she be forgotten; in her virginity lest she be seduced, and in the house of her husband lest she go astray. My son, keep a strict watch over thy daughter, lest she make thee a derision (Exod. 32, 25: \mathfrak{G} $\epsilon\pi\acute{\iota}\chi\alpha\rho\mu\alpha$) to thine enemies; a byword in the city and a cursing of the people, and thou be shamed in the congregation of the gate. ⁸ Marg. obdurate. ⁹ Reading $\kappa\tau\eta$ for $\kappa\tau\eta$. ¹⁰ So text: perhaps, and where there are many ($\pi\upsilon\lambda\iota$) hands, open [not].
